

A BIG STRIKE ON PENNSY LINE

Trainmen Fail to Get Concessions and Vote to Quit Their Jobs.

FIFTEEN THOUSAND WILL GO

America's Greatest System May Be Tied Up When Order Takes Effect.

PHILADELPHIA, July 15.—The Pennsylvania Railroad Company is facing one of the biggest strikes in its history. At a conference yesterday of representatives of the trainmen's unions and the officials of the railroad there was a failure of all efforts of the employees to obtain concessions from the company.

Following the announcement that no agreement could be reached the trainmen in a general meeting voted overwhelmingly to strike.

Negotiations for a settlement of the differences have been in progress for several days.

If the order is carried out fifteen thousand men will quit work and leave the rolling stock of the Pennsylvania lines unmanned.

The reason given for the demand for higher wages is that the cost of living has advanced more rapidly during the past few months than have the wages of the workmen.

ALLEGED HORSE THIEF CAPTURED

Now in the Tanks Awaiting Trial—Says He Needed Stock to Plow His Farm.

Nagamori, formerly of Japan, may thank the stars under which he was born that he never thought of journeying on to the mainland to take up a residence in some of the big cattle States, for he might now be adorning a limb of a tree with the trademark of the vigilance committee attached to his person. Nagamori is accused of being a horsethief, and on the strength of that accusation he was brought in from Waialua yesterday by a police officer, having been committed to the circuit court for trial by Judge Mahaulu.

About June 1 two horses disappeared from Waimanalo. One was owned by a man named McGowan and the other belonged to a Japanese. Their disappearance was noted and the information sent to different parts of the island.

Deputy Sheriff Oscar Cox of Waialua recently heard of the two horses being used on Japanese pineapple plantations at Wahiawa. He sent an officer up there with McGowan, and they found the two horses in the possession of Otamori, a friend of Nagamori. Otamori was arrested and taken to Waialua. He said the horses belonged to Nagamori, who had a pineapple plantation adjoining his. Nagamori, he said, was working in a tunnel at Kawailoa Gulch. Cox went there to arrest Nagamori, and arrived just ahead of some of the latter's friends, who had tried to reach him first to warn him that the police were after him.

The police report that he confessed he stole the horses, and said his reason was that he wanted some horses for his pineapple ranch.

Otamori was paying forty-five cents a day for each horse as rental.

TWO BIG GUN CARRIAGES HAVE ARRIVED

Two big gun carriages arrived on the Wilhelmina, consigned to Captain Falls, depot quartermaster. These are reported to be destined for the Fort Ruger battery of mortars, to replace those found defective after test firing early in the year. When the defects are replaced on all four guns put out of commission and the fire control is entirely installed, the Coast Artillerymen will probably engage in practice with the big guns and projectiles will be discharged over Diamond Head far out to sea.

IN FLOWER-LINED GRAVE

Remains of George C. Beckley Are Accorded Full Masonic Honors.

A flower-lined grave received the remains of the late George C. Moobean Beckley in Nuanuu Cemetery yesterday afternoon, the Masonic ritual being said as the last offices of the dead were performed. Daisies and malle pinned to white tarleton were used to cover the sides and bottom of the grave, so that not a particle of earth was to be seen, and when the casket was lowered and covered with more flowers and turf, the beautiful floral offerings and magnificent set pieces were strewn over the plot until it was a carpet of fragrant blossoms.

As the funeral procession reached the cemetery the Hawaiian band, which had been sent there by Mayor Fern, played soft music, and music was heard all during the masonic ceremony, which was led by L. M. Vetlesen, master of Hawaiian Lodge.

There were three ceremonies over the body of the dead alii. At noon a private service was had for the immediate members of the family, Canon Simpson of St. Andrew's Cathedral officiating. At two o'clock another service was held, when Rev. Stephen L. Deaha of Hilo made a funeral address, the service being attended by the family and close friends. The choir of Kawaiaho Church was present, led by Rev. Moses Nakulua. Princess Kawanaakoa and Princess Kalaniana'ole were present. Members of Kamehameha Lodge, composed of Hawaiians, were also in attendance, and six high chiefs were the pallbearers. They were the High Chiefs Palekalulu, Makaniel, David Hoopili, and Leander Beckley. As the casket was borne from the house Aloha Oe was played beautifully as a flute solo by Fred Malulani Beckley.

On reaching the Masonic Temple, where Hawaiian Lodge officiated, the pallbearers were Colonel Soper and Robert Hare for the Masons; Rev. S. L. Deaha and Carlos Long for the Kamehamehas; Capt. T. K. Clarke and Captain Macaulay, for the Masters and Pilots association; Cecil Brown and Mark Robinson, representing the citizens. At the Masonic Temple there were many beautiful floral set pieces, a large number representing anchors in token of the deceased's almost life-long occupation.

The procession from the Masonic Temple to the cemetery was headed by the Kamehameha Lodge, each member wearing the handsome yellow and red ahuala insignia of the order, and the Masons.

John Cummins, who was a close friend of the deceased, has been very (Continued on page 8.)

AUTHORITIES TO LEARN AUTHENTICITY OF REMAINS

Professor Brigham, Prince Kuhio and Others Will See if Bones in Casket Are Those of Conqueror.

Within a few weeks an investigation will be made to determine whether or not certain bones which now repose in a casket in the royal mausoleum in Nuanuu Valley are those of Kamehameha the Great.

Of all the caskets containing royal dead that have been taken to the mausoleum plot, only one remains above ground—a casket without a place for final reception, a casket which is still subject to suspicion as not being the receptacle for the bones of the Napoleon of the Pacific.

When Prince Kuhio returns to Honolulu from Washington, he, together with Professor Brigham, curator of the Bishop Museum, and other well-known residents of the Islands who are versed in history and the disposition of the dead of ancient times, will be asked to investigate the lone casket in the mausoleum.

Upon their findings will depend much for their final disposition. Should they be proven to be those of Kamehameha, who ruled all the Islands of the Hawaiian Group, they will be given a fitting burial and they will repose beneath a memorial which will be the most pretensions in the Pacific, and it will be erected by Hon. Charles R. Bishop, who married the Princess Pauahi Bishop, and who is now a banker in San Francisco.

Should they not be determined as the bones of Kamehameha, they may, in all likelihood, be proven as those of Liloa, the first king of Hawaii, who lived and ruled some twenty generations ago, more or less, a time that is shadowy with the complexities of traditions and myths.

Several decades ago, during the time when Governor Kekunaoa was a power in the administration of the government of the Islands, a British warship called here to take on board the bones of Captain Cook, the brilliant British navigator, who discovered the Hawaiian Islands and who lost his life on the shore at Kealahou Bay, near where a monument was afterwards erected to his memory. The British ship went to Kealahou Bay, and some Hawaiians, who claimed to know where the bones were hidden, led the British commander and island officials to a cave where there were a large number of nets containing bones. A net was selected as the one containing those of Captain Cook.

As the Hawaiians went on board the British vessel with the bones, Governor Kekunaoa saw them and he instantly exclaimed:

"You have the wrong bones; those are not Captain Cook's. Some one will die for this."

Just then the British naval captain passed by and the old governor said: "And there is the man who will die." The net of bones, however, was kept on board and the ship sailed for Honolulu, and on arrival here the captain dropped dead.

Whether that same netful of bones was discarded as those of Captain Cook is not certain, but it is generally understood that the bones believed to be those of Captain Cook were stated to be those of Liloa, first king of Hawaii. They were placed in a casket.

Later, when Kalakaua was king, he made a trip to Kealahou, and was taken to the same cave or one near by and from these numerous sets of bones one was chosen as containing those of Kamehameha. They were brought to Honolulu and placed by Kalakaua in the casket where also repose the bones said to be those of Liloa. And there is a third set of bones in the same casket, those of Umi.

The bones of Kamehameha were supposed to have been taken from the place where the mourners were preparing them for final interment. They were supposed to have been taken at dead of night from under the guard of soldiers and retainers, by Hoolulu and Hoopili, ancestors of the late George C. Beckley who was buried yesterday. These two princes fled with the bones along the shore, and while one skirted the coast in a canoe, the other ran along the beach, killing a native en route, in order that the man would never tell any one that he had seen the prince at night on that coast. According to stories handed down in the families intimately associated with Kamehameha, one of the princes had to dive under the water, swim through an opening in some rocks, and then emerge into a chamber where the bones were finally hidden.

A few years ago a story came from Hawaii that a new cave had been entered and some valuable relics of the ancient days found, including war canoes, numerous collections of bones, valuable tapes, and it was also rumored that certain bones had been sent from this cave to the Bishop Museum and were believed to be those of Kamehameha. No report has ever come from the museum to the public that those bones were those of Kamehameha, nor has the fact been established.

The verdict of the ones chosen to investigate the coffin in the mausoleum will probably end forever a question which has troubled the minds of almost all Hawaiians.

HARBOR IS SCENE OF BOMBARDMENT

Warships Fire 200 Guns—U. S. N. Helps French Celebrate Bastille's Fall.

DE CASTRIES A BUSY HOST

The Army, Navy, Territorial and Foreign Representatives Pay Respects.

If there had been a real naval battle in Honolulu harbor yesterday there could not have been much more firing of guns by the visiting warships and the battery at the naval station. The big French cruiser Montcalm's presence here was the occasion for the firing of more than two hundred guns. It was the French national holiday, and Rear-Admiral Rees and Acting-Governor Mott-Smith, representing the United States Navy and the Territorial Government of Hawaii, and all the foreign consuls called upon Rear-Admiral de la Croix de Castries, commander of the Montcalm.

July 14 is a great day for all Frenchmen except the Royalists. The Bastille, famous in history as the prison in which thousands of French prisoners were confined for all sorts of real and fancied offenses against the Louises and their favorites, was taken by the revolutionists on July 14, 1789, and all persons held between its grim walls were freed. The event is considered the turning point in French history, at least one of the great events in the struggle of liberty-loving Frenchmen for freedom from tyrannous rule. The old prison was the place where the kings sent prisoners taken by means of lettres-de-cachet a kind of warrant of arrest which the monarchs granted on the application of favorites who wanted to get rid of their enemies. These prisoners were not granted the right of trial; they were simply held till the kings got ready to turn them loose. The assault upon the prison was, of course, one of the incidents in the rise of the revolutionists and the overthrow of the old regime. Other prisons in France were forced to yield in the same way.

At eight o'clock yesterday morning the Montcalm saluted the tricolor with twenty-one guns. Two hours later, Rear-Admiral C. P. Rees, U. S. N., called upon Admiral de Castries aboard the cruiser and was accorded a salute of thirteen guns as he left the vessel. At exactly twelve o'clock noon the Montcalm started another 21-gun salute. At the same instant the naval station battery and the forward guns on the American cruisers Cleveland and Chattanooga began harking a similar salute. For a time it looked like a real naval battle. A person unfamiliar with naval customs would have wondered whether the United States and France were at war with each other. Forty-eight guns were fired in a very few minutes. The battery inside the naval station was trained directly upon the bow of the Montcalm. Up in the fighting top of the Montcalm the French sailors blazed away with three rapid-firers, one trained toward the wireless station, another at the commandant's flagstaff. The Chattanooga's gun was trained directly on the broadside of the Montcalm, while the Cleveland's saluter fired off into space toward the transport Sherman over at the Oceanic wharf. The discharge (Continued on page 8.)

VICTIM OF SHOOTING IN FAVORABLE CONDITION

Kamaka Waiwai, the woman who was shot Wednesday evening by her husband who, while partially intoxicated and in a fit of jealousy because his wife had sued him for a divorce, attempted to kill her, was not suffering much last night, and it is believed she will recover.

Waiwai is still in jail, and as yet nothing has been done by either side of the case. The evidence in the case will be made known whenever the accused is given a preliminary trial.

One of the old women whom Waiwai kissed upon telling her he intended committing suicide, said she smelled liquor on his breath.

Deputy Sheriff C. H. Rose last night denied there was a policeman near the scene of the shooting and did not make any attempt to arrest the would-be murderer. He said the officer was several blocks distant.

HARMON MAKES IT HOT FOR MOB

Newark Mayor and Sheriff Resign and Many Arrests Follow Lynching.

SEQUEL TO HORRIBLE MURDER

Lawless Crowd Took Antislavery Detective From Jail and Killed Him.

NEWARK, O., July 15.—The mayor of this city and the county sheriff resigned yesterday following late developments in the investigation of the lynching of Carl Etherington by a lawless mob who dragged him from the county jail on the night of July 8 and hanged him in a public place. The mayor was ordered to vacate his office last Monday by Governor Harmon, but he held his place until yesterday.

Many arrests have been made since the lynching, and it is believed others will follow during the next few days. Those arrested are accused of participating in the killing of Etherington. The public officials are only charged with having failed to enforce the law and to prevent the lynching.

Strong pressure is being brought to bear against the lynchers by the Governor. Attorney-General Ulysses Grant Denman is personally directing the investigation and will appear for the prosecution.

Etherington was employed by the antislavery league in a raid on low dives in the city, and while on official duty he shot and fatally wounded a saloon-keeper in a row. In spite of his piteous cries for mercy, the mob dragged him out of jail and killed him.
